Committee Will Hear Analyses of Revolution

United Press International

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee announced yesterday that it will begin a series of public hearing Monday on the nature and significance for U.S. policy of "revolutions abroad" — including Vietnam.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) announced that the first witness to be heard will be Prof. Crane Brinton of Harvard University on the tendencies of revolutions to develop through certain stages. He is the author of "The Anatomy of Revolution."

On Wednesday, Feb. 21, the Committee will hear testimony on revolution in China and Asia and their significance for the United States. Appearing will be Prof. Richard Solomon of the Center for Chinese Studies of the University of Michigan and James Thompson, former assistant to the National Security Council and now an associate of the Institute of Politics at Harvard.

On Monday, Feb. 26, Prof. Louis Hartz of Harvard will testify on American attitudes toward revolution abroad. He is the author of "The Liberal Tradition in America" and other works.

On March 7, Dr. John McAlister of the Center of International Studies of Princeton University will testify on revolution and modernization in Vietnam.
